

PACKAGING POLICY

Here at Big Time Wine we don't pretend to be brain surgeons. If we were we wouldn't be selling wine and the like ... we'd just be drinking it (outside of operating hours of course!).

One thing we do know though is that we all need to take a little pressure off our beautiful planet by using materials which breakdown naturally; we need to create sustainable practises that reduce what we take from the planet; and we need to recycle where possible.

To this end, whenever we pick, pack and send our products to you, we try to steer clear of polystyrene and similar, and RE-USE CARDBOARD BOXES & PACKAGING WHERE POSSIBLE.

Therefore, when you receive an order from Big Time Wine you may find it to be packed in a differently branded box or wrapped in a cardboard box outer that was previously used to ship the product to us.

We trust you understand what we are doing may be minimal, but it is one small way we are trying to so our little bit to contribute to help create a better world for all of us.

Don't worry - we still use bubble wrap where required (and recycled if at all possible) – and you will still receive your order safe and sound (complete with a personally hand written note and a small gift of some sort from Tosh). And let's face it... how often do you sit looking at the box your wine was delivered in?

We trust we have your support and understanding in this decision we have made, and look forward to having you help us save the world one tiny step at a time!

One last thing. When you get your wine, or vodka, or cider or beer, and you crack open that first glass or mouthful, think of the planet whispering in your ear 'Thank You!'

...And Tosh whispering in the other:

'Don't Whinge... Wine!!!'
